You're putting in a lot of physical effort when doing household chores. Yet, when you don't possess that mindset of housework as exercise, then your body will respond in kind. I would suggest that you journal your day and compare it with going to the gym. Photo from NPR Back in 2007, Dr. Ellen Langer and Dr. Alia Crum conducted a study on 84 hotel maids. Heck, what about how you were able to shift your body and it affect your thoughts? Going further, if you're gardening, the outdoor activity will certainly burn off your body fat and provide Vitamin D from the sun. What if I told you that when you do housework, you'll get fitter? That effort burns calories and gets your body into good shape. You just may be surprised at what you do, especially if you have children at home. Mind-set matters: Exercise and the placebo effect. They were split into two groups. Langer. That alone will keep you busy. 2007. After 4 weeks, the group that was informed that what they did was exercise, had a drop in weight, blood pressure, body fat, waist-to-hip ratio and body mass index. How many times have you had a thought it affected how you feel? The other group had no change at all. What we think and believe can have a profound affect on our lives and profound effect on our bodies. And on top of that, it's as effective as going to the gym. Think about it. One group (control) was simply watched and told nothing more, while the other group (experimental) was told that what they were doing was equivalent of exercising at a gym. The important thing is that you look at your daily activities and rethink them. 2: 165-171 Retrieved from HUL.InstRepos:3196007 on April 9, 2017 Loading PreviewSorry, preview is currently unavailable. You can download the paper by clicking the button above. If you're doing household chores, might they simply be physical movement much like going to a gym? Now is the time to get to your home-based workout... Reference: Crum, Alia J., and Ellen J. There was no behavior change in either group. I would surmise that the experimental group did have mindset shift and that helped to change what they thought about themselves and their activity. Psychological Science 18, no. It works both ways. There may have been lower levels of cortisol (stress hormones) that helped them to reduce inflammation and to lose fat.
